ANTHONY BOAME

BIOGRAPHY

“My name is Anthony Boame and I am running for one of the five at large seats on the city council. I'm passionate about being a voice for those who struggle to always get the representation they deserve. While in college I learned the value of how much the people of the community affect the decision of what happens in where they are living. As a congressional intern on Capitol Hill, I had seen first hand what the constituents needed and how they voiced their opinion and I wanted to be able to help remedy the problems that they all had. In college I was Co-President of an organization called CiviCorp. This group served to bridge the gap between differing political views through civics education. We put together an event called First In The Nation. The First In The Nation event brought all political parties and varying political leaders running for President, and already presiding in varying offices to come and open discussions on happenings that are going on in America and how we as Americans can come together and help our country be a wonderful thriving place. As your city councilor, I will strive to be the most connected elected official to my constituents. Always listening, bringing people together, and looking to increase the number of seats at the table. I also look forward to building on Keene's current momentum, making it an attractive place to live for young people and those with diverse backgrounds. As a second generation American, I'm uniquely qualified to help us become an even more welcoming and diverse community. Keene is a wonderful place to live and the people here in Keene make it an even more unique experience. I can't wait to lend my experience to making it an even better place to be for everyone.”
